

Case 1698/7/7/24 - Clare Spottiswoode CBE v Airwave Solutions Limited, Motorola Solutions UK Limited & Motorola Solutions, Inc – September 2026 CMC Summary

Summary

The case management conference (CMC) held on 24 September 2026 principally concerned the following matters:

- The parties' applications to adduce expert evidence in these proceedings in the fields of competition economics and valuation and accounting.
- Further disclosure to be provided by (i) the Defendants; (ii) the Home Office; and (iii) Class members other than the Home Office (OCMs).
- Directions to Trial 1, including the timing of factual and expert evidence.

Expert Evidence

The Tribunal directed that the parties file a list for each expert they intend to adduce evidence from, specifying: (i) the proposed issues to be addressed by that expert; and (ii) how the experts intend to provide evidence on those issues, clearly distinguishing between the issues to be considered by the competition economist and the forensic accountant.

The Defendants were also directed to file updated methodology statements for its two proposed experts, addressing certain methodological questions raised by the Tribunal and the Class Representative (CR) concerning its proposed asset valuation methodology.

The Tribunal also ordered that the parties' experts exchange reports simultaneously and that a "Trial Expert Report" be filed addressing the outstanding matters in dispute to be determined at trial.

Further disclosure

Prior to the CMC, the CR, the Home Office and the Defendants agreed the scope of multiple further disclosure requests.

The Tribunal directed that the Defendants also disclose the Google Chat and Google Drive records of various key Motorola individuals, and the text messages of the CEO of Motorola Solutions Inc.

The CR and the Defendants agreed the scope of disclosure from a sample of 22 OCMs prior to the CMC. The CR will now liaise with each of the OCMs in the sample in relation to obtaining this disclosure.

Miscellaneous

The Defendants were ordered to provide an update as to their costs incurred to date, and the parties were directed to exchange versions of their litigation budgets that indicate the estimated number of hours to be spent across the proceedings.
